Modern Films is a London-based film production, distribution and digital exhibition company, working with rising and established talent from around the world and bringing innovative global stories to local audiences.

They focus on creating connections between content, context and curation, with a particular emphasis on dialogues around pressing social issues of our time through the power of cinema, creative freedom and cultural expression.

Established in 2017, Modern Films was launched as an alternative to the traditional model of the film value chain to work across borders, media and windows.
